

March 5th 1997, Edward Wayne Edwards, joe10rbit, Google Blogs

Hello Agent@large,

I don't blame you for not letting me babysit your children. I'm sure that even the people who are able to understand and appreciate my reality would be very reluctant, to put it mildly, to entrust me with the care of someone they love. And rightly so. Having no ability to relate positively with any human being, on an emotional level, makes me a poor choice to be a caretaker over a fellow human being.

You are certainly entitled to view me as being ridiculous and pathetic. The fact is, I view you and the society that you represent as being just as ridiculous and pathetic, if not more so. Have I ever asked you for your respect? I never ask anyone for anything. All I do is state my truth, and than allow all people to decide how they wish to view me. As you can see from the posts, Ia few people have somehow decided that I am worthy of a little respect. I am glad you do not respect me, because I find your mindset to be so narrow and closed that I would feel uneasy if I had your respect. I do respect myself very much, contrary to your proclamation. I honor and validate my existence each and every day. As to having respect for others, I do have intellectual respect for a few people that I view as being intelligent and kind. But on a purely emotional level you are probably correct in saying that I have no respect for others. People are mirrors, I reflect back at society the sum total of what society reflected at me from my birth up until age 13. Nobody respected me, and now I respect noone, on an emotional level.

Take care, JOE